From the Little Rock Gastle.]

What is impossible to put any other reasonable construction upon the meaning of the law—the simple statement of the case is sufficient to demonstrate the truth of the proposition. It is true that under the old state law of the State, the functions of the State, the functions of the state that of the propositions of the State for two years, and even contemplates the control of registration and election two years hence, and the perpetuation of this despotic power and tyraunic reign for four the office and powers and tyraunic reign for four the office and powers and year and tyraunic reign for four the office and powers and year and tyraunic reign for four the office and powers and year and tyraunic reign for four the office and powers and year and years and even to power and tyraunic reign for four the other and year power and tyrannic reign for four the office devolve upon the Lieuten-years more. It will therefore be seen ant-Governor; and all that the Lieuhat the issue involves interests of the tenont-Governor has to do in such most momentous magnitude and importance. If Clayton succeeds in his despotic and diabolical schemes, the thereby becomes duly and Constitu-

as to avert this dreadful calamity? If the Supreme Court falls, then there s but one hope left, and that is in the firmness and fidelity of the majority of the House of Representatives, who have thus far shown themselves to be true friends and faithful representawhich they can, if they will, use with powerful and telling effect. They have the Governor and all his gang of wretched plunderers in their grasp, and can, if they will, force them to terms, and coerce them into a re-spectful regard for the rights, wishes, and interests of the people. They hold one sure check upon the mad schemes all other appeals and all other remeday [yesterday]. In our opinion the House of Representatives was forced from an absolute and pressing necessity to resort to the harsh measures against the Governor which they have thought proper to adopt. Something of that kind seemed absolutely necessary to arrest the Governor in the consummation of his mad and revolutionary schemes which were patent to the most casual observer. He was not only abusing the power and influence of the high office, but was using them manifestly for the purpose of defeating manifestly for the purpose of defeating this rather mysterious death it is not the will and the wishes of the people, and bringing about results which it was reasonably feared would be disastrous to the rights, interests and fibrable await the legal investigation for the

THE LAW OF THE CASE.

What is the legal effect of the House Resolution, impeaching Governor Clayton and suspending him from the functions of his office? This is an important question, for "thrice armed is he whose cause is just" and fortified his exercising the functions of his of-fice, before or during his trial? That's the question, and the Constitution answers that question by making a musements or suffer some of the plain and positive provision for such an emergency.
